NATIONAL HEALTH CENTER WEEK

AUGUST 7-13, 2011

National Health Center Week, held annually during the second week of August, is aimed at celebrating and recognizing the quality services that Community Health Centers provide across the nation.

Community Health Centers serve many populations, including the uninsured and underserved, and provide access to affordable, accessible health care. According to the National Association of Community Health Centers, over 20 million people are currently served by Community Health Centers, of which 7.2 million are uninsured, and more than half of the patients live in rural areas, some of whom have insurance, but do not have access to local health services, and the other half of patients tends to live in economically depressed inner city communities.

Thank you for showing your support of your local Community Health Center. Our ongoing commitment to you is to provide quality, affordable primary and preventative care to the underserved in Iowa.
